Anthony Polito recently joined Design Collective as a project architect, bringing 13 years of professional experience and a broad range of skill sets to the firm. Prior to moving to Baltimore, Anthony was with Robert A.M. Stern Architects in New York where he worked on design development for The GAP headquarters offices in San Francisco, California and a proposed master plan for Georgetown University in Washington, DC, that included three (3) residence halls and a 1200-seat dining hall. Anthony earned his Bachelor of Architectural Technology from New York Institute of Technology (NYIT) and a degree in Special Effects from New York University (NYU).
